London (August 20, 2018) - The "Italian London Short Film Festival" returns to London for its second edition on November 4th 2018.

"IL Film Festival" is the short film festival based in London dedicated to movies with an Italian flavor. A buzzing night to have a taste, in little bites, of the Italian cinema. Run by two young Italian actors who made of London their new home, the Festival aims to bring closer the two worlds. Produced and directed by Alessandro Marchese and co-Directed by Alessandro Ananasso.

"Since the recent rebirth of love for Italian cinema, we wanted to give the opportunity to new talent to showcase their films with the sounds of Italian language" Artistic Director Alessandro Marchese.

The Italian London Short Film Festival will not only represent a platform for Italian directors to showcase their short films to London's international audience, but will also give the opportunity to the lovers of this poetic language to practice with the "natives".

Submissions are now open via Festival Freeway (<https://filmfreeway.com/ILFilmFestival>)

This second edition of the Festival will be hosted by Draper Hall (just five minutes walk from Elephant and Castle station), in collaboration with Draper Together., a charity whose mission is to stretch out a neighbourly hand to build unity where there is division and work together to lift up the community.
